Osamah Khalil is Assistant Professor of U.S. and Middle East History at Syracuse University. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley in 2011 and has a BA in History and Biology from Temple University. In his talk, Professor Khalil will discuss the academic and diplomatic development of Middle East Studies between World War II and the passage of the National Defense Education Act (NDEA) in 1958.

Contact david.guba@temple.edu for more details.