Belinda Davis is an associate professor of history at Rutgers University. She is the author of numerous books and articles, including Home Fires Burning: Food, Politics, and Everyday Life in World War I Berlin (2000). She is the co-author of Changing the World, Changing Oneself: Political Protest and Transnational Identities in 1960s/70s, West Germany and the U.S. (2010).

Following the talk, Professors Petra Goedde, Rita Krueger, and Jay Lockenour will participate in a roundtable discussion. A reception with refreshments will take place at 5:00.

This event is hosted by Temple University’s General Education Program and the Center for the Study of Force and Diplomacy.